教學目標與內容	This class is an intermediate writing class for nonnative speakers of English. It uses high-interest topics to teach rhetoric, grammar, and sentence structure. The purpose of this class is to teach basic academic writing skills. They include a variety of organizational patterns, selected grammatical structures and sentence structures, and the steps in the writing process. This class guides the students through a series of steps to produce well-organized, adequately developed paragraphs and essays. As students learn to apply all of these skills to their writing, their papers will improve, and also they will develop more confidence in their ability to write.

科目簡介(可含大綱及教學進度)：	This English composition class teaches the writing process using simple and clear language that guides the students through a step-by-step process to produce well-organized paragraphs and essays. The material covers a wide range of skills, from basic punctuation and capitalization rules to rather advanced clause work. This class contains eight unites, each requiring four to six hours of class time. They are: Paragraph Organization, Essay Organization, Logical Division of Ideas, Supporting an Opinion, Writing about People, Narrtion, Description, and Comparison-Contrast. Each unit has four sections: The Writing Process, Organization, Grammar and Mecha and Sentence Structure. Students begin work on a topic at the beginning of each unit, ponder it while working through the unit, and perfect it at the end in a final writing assignment. Each time students work on and complete an assignment they will have added another building block to strengthen their foundation as a writer.
